

Reconstruction of the Capitol

The Faces of Reconstruction

By Logan Helmick

Period 1

At that time period, Congress was made up of radical Republicans. They wanted to protect the rights of newly freed slaves and make the south pay dearly for the war. This photo represents the radical congress in a trial to protect those rights.

This is a picture of a broken railroad track in North Carolina by the Union. This picture was taken in 1866.

Refugees of the Civil War in Charleston, South Carolina during the Reconstruction era. August 1866.

Picture of Charleston, South Carolina and its economical places of business when reconstruction took place.

Atlanta's railyard and roundhouse in ruins shortly after the war.

Picture of Savannah, Georgia and how it looked before Reconstruction took action.

A family in Virginia trying to rebuild after what they had lost during the Civil War.

Another picture of Atlanta immediately after the Civil War.

Picture of a southern Mississippi town after the Civil War had ended and what there was to restore.

TWO MEMBERS OF THE KU-KLUX KLAN IN THEIR DISGUISES.

The KKK was founded in Pulaski, Tennessee to combat Reconstruction reforms and intimidate African Americans. This picture shows two klan members in their disguises.

The Government issued the Freedmans Bureau. It was an organization within Reconstruction to help out newly freed blacks that had been affected by the Civil War.

This is a picture of the ruins of Columbia, South Carolina in 1865.

Richmond, VA in 1865 after the destruction of the Civil War.

RECONSTRUCTION OF THE SOUTH.

This picture illustrates Reconstruction supported by farmers, mechanics, and laborers. It is also inviting African Americans to become citizens of the North.

This is a picture of how Reconstruction works, as it says at the bottom of it. It was explained to anyone who read the paper.

This would be yet another picture of Charleston,
South Carolina in ruins in 1866.

This is a picture of Richmond, VA in 1865 shortly after the war had ended.

This is a lookdown on Richmond, VA in 1866.
Reconstruction was under-way.

Last, but not least, a picture of Fredricksburg in late 1865 shortly after Reconstruction began.