

The Faces of Reconstru ction

This shows the city in the process of being reconstructed.

This is the train and waggons they used during reconstruction.

These pictures are the south after the Civil War.

This picture shows the Library of Congress in South Carolina in ruins.

This picture shows Chareleston in ruins after the war.

This picture shows Ulysses S. Grant and her staff in Chattanooga, TN during reconstruction.

Andrew Johnson moved to reconstruct the south.

This picture was taken in the north. It is the 26th U.S. colored volunteered infantry on parade. It was taken in 1865.

The condition of freed slaves and the destruction of southern industry led redical republicans to call for greater federal intervention in the south.

This picture shows the remains of battery Huger located near the spanish fort between the Blakely and Apalachee rivers.

This picture shows how bad the land looked and how much rebuilding had to be done.

This is an illustration after Lincoln's assassination, reconciliation is offered in Lincoln's memory to the secessionist in the south.

These pictures are from the kkk during the reconstruction of the Civil War.

This is after the Civil War when they were reconstructing.

This is what the land looked like after the war.

This is a waterway that is dried up and the walls of stone in the back round are destroyed.